French filmmaker Jerome Dolbert is hosting auditions for "Year of the Diamond" series of plays which will feature actors, singers and dancers of all ages. It's a production made up of seven plays and dozens of actors with a total of 12 dance sequences to illustrate the lives of many famous individuals.

Auditions run from 12 noon to 4 p.m. All must arrive by noon to be considered.

Although much of the production and storylines are still under wraps, Dolbert says the stories will deal with major historical figures such as Mary, mother of Jesus Christ; Harriet Tubman, Rosa Parks and many others.

The production aims to use local talent from Compton and surrounding to communities to encourage and nurture the creativity and aspirations of the performers in the area. Each show will include original musical dance and video interpretations that would coincide with the stage dialogue.

Dolbert is known for his work in French television and the film "The Others" and is today preparing for to present his series of plays in the spring. To learn more, please visit www.yearofthediamond.org.
